

portland stone - naturally

Private Residence
London SW1

Following the acquisition of the Old Police Station the new owner was keen to restore many of the existing stone features and to develop the property into a larger residence.

Liam O'Connor Architects were appointed to design the project and to ensure the quality of workmanship.

Independent Basebed was selected and used throughout the private residence, both internally and externally, this included a detailed elliptical cantilever staircase.

The continuity of stone was carried through the ground floor and interest was added to the design by laying the flooring tiles in a diagonal pattern and surrounding them with an ornamental border.

Architect/Designer: Liam O'Connor Architects Client: Private Main Contractor: Holloway White Allom
Location: Chelsea, London Portland Stone: Independent Basebed
Scope of Project: Demolition of Police Station and development of residential accommodation

